

Data structures and abstract data types.

A data structure, typically a tree, of the program being compiled.

With grammars.

A program without loops and conditionals.

Using the `datatype` declaration. One declaration per type.
One constructor in the declaration per rule.

They increase modularity. You do not need to look outside the file to determine where a symbol comes from.